ANDES COIL PROCESSORS ADDS DALLAS WAREHOUSE AND STORAGE FACILITY

DALLAS (September 3, 2015) – Andes Coil Processors LLC announced today it has opened a 54,000-square-foot warehouse and storage facility at 1401 W. Commerce St., Dallas, TX, 75208. The warehouse complements the existing 109,000-square-foot facility in Lewisville, TX.

The Commerce Street warehouse will offer short-track rail service five days a week by DGNO Railroad and will service Union Pacific Railroad, Burlington Northern Santa Fe, and Kansas City Railways from the DGNO Rail Spur #W685. In Phase 1, the Commerce Street warehouse is crane served and offers loading, unloading and storage of steel coils up to 100,000 pounds as well as other freight for trans-loading and storage for customers. For Phase 2, additional processing capacity will be added to complement the Lewisville facility.

“What sets Andes apart from many of its competitors is rail access into our facilities and the space to stage multiple railcars on site,” said Josh DuBois, General Manager of the Andes’ Lewisville facility. “Material can be shipped directly from producing mills as well as ports of entry to Andes which is an advantage to our customers. Our new warehouse strengthens Andes’ ability to provide superior service, quick turnaround times and on-time delivery for our end-users.”

This is another substantial move by Andes as the company recently began offering rail service at its Gary, Ind., facility. As a toll processor, Andes does not own steel, but rather provides processing and logistical services to its customers.
